Future Total Force Talking Points

Key Messages

- By employing our forces more efficiently we can produce greater combat capability. Future Total Force constructs optimize the capabilities of all the Air Force components and their members: creating a common vision among separate components.
- As the Air Force transforms to face the increasingly complex challenges of the 21st century, FTF will strive to ensure that units of all components are positioned to transition into new and exciting missions.
- In partnership with the AFR, ANG, TAGs and other stakeholders, we will work to align potential mission opportunities for ARC units impacted by BRAC.
- Neither BRAC nor FTF will degrade the Air Force's ability to defend the Homeland.
- FTF will enhance the Air Force's ability to defend the Homeland by building on both state and regional capability to respond to emerging threats and natural disasters.

Senior Leaders are Saying

- "This seamless integration in combat is touted by many as a benchmark for how the Total Force vision should be done. It is time that we start thinking about ways to bring these superb leveraging capabilities back home in the day-to-day way that we look at our Total Force." (CSAF)
- "Employing the Future Total Force concept of integrating while retaining individual unit identities, esprit and cultures, is crucial to keeping our Air Force the most awesome fighting force on the planet." (VCSAF)
- "Future Total Force provides the Air Force Reserve the opportunity to continue to be an integral member of the Air Force team. By exploring new organizational constructs, we are poised to make transformational leaps now and throughout the 21st century by leveraging the unique strengths that active duty and citizen airmen bring to the fight." (Lt Gen John Bradley, Chief of Air Force Reserve)
